RAILROADS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

It was pleasant to hear Gov. Fowle state, as he did in his speech at the opening of the fair at Newbern, that in railroad progress for the past year North Carolina stands next to Ohio, which State exhibits the greatest increase of mileage. This would indicate that this State has now nearly three thousand miles of railroad complete and in operation, and roads projected or begun which will add, with reasonable certainty of completion, from six hundred to eight hundred miles in addition. While the State is not gridironed like Illinois and some other States, and while it is not embarrassed by a multiplicity of competing parallel lines, it is gratifying to find that in the distribution of railroad conveniences every part of its widely separated and diversely characterized territory has shared with almost exact quality in the work that has been done and the benefits that have been derived. The great flat regions of the East are traversed through their whole extent and the mountains are intersected with one great longitudinal line while all possible transverse lines are built or projected. One great object of this railroad spirit was to build up one or more North Carolina seaports to hold the same relation to this State that Norfolk has to Virginia, Charleston to South Carolina or Savannah to Georgia. This may not be realized to the full extent, for many of the new railroads run in those artificial—or perhaps natural—channels through which the products of North Carolina flowed into South Carolina and Virginia. But the incidental advantage is unquestionably great, as exemplified by the prosperity of Wilmington, Newbern, Washington and Elizabeth City, all of them local points of railroad enterprises. Apart from the seaports, the interior development has been very great. We have known much of the State before there was a yard of railroad on its surface; we have known it when a forest wilderness occupied the present sites of our great and prosperous towns, and when swaying fields spread their ample acres on ground now covered with thriving villages. This change is absolutely and entirely due to the construction of railroads. Still greater development is to follow their extension. Therefore we listened with much gratification to the statement of Gov. Fowle that so much had been done, and knowing what great results had followed the work of the past or present, could look forward with confident assurance to what was to come of the future.

New York City is sore under the order of Secretary Windom to convert Liberty Island in the harbor, the site of the world-renowned Statue of Liberty, into a landing place for European emigrants. It is naturally regarded as desecration of a spot in a manner made sacred to liberty by the erection of so conspicuous and magnificent a tribute to the sentiment of liberty, and also the appropriate depository of the generous and splendid expression of the sympathetic feeling of a sister republic, vying with the United States in the presentation of the facts and truths of what can be accomplished through the unfettered freedom of popular government. To degrade the ground around the base of a statue so glorious and expressive, to convert the premises into a great caravanserai for the entertainment of the foreign wanderer of all nations, is insult to the aspiration to make liberty a perpetual sentiment by the reminder of its magnificent expression. Perhaps the reverence of Mr. Windom for the national liberties is not as lofty as it ought to be; perhaps his purpose is to lower it still more by degrading its concrete expression in the marvelous statue by surrounding it by what is mean and ignoble. However, the New York people gave another construction to Secretary Windom's order; they see in it another expression of party hostility, such as was exhibited in the opposition to New York as the location for the quadricentennial. Outside of the city there will be many who will agree with them that gross violation has been done to a sentiment which, holding liberty at its proper value, delighted to know that Bartholdi's great work stood isolated in its dignity, uncontaminated by the proximity of anything mean and incompatible.

We are pleased to see our friend the News and Observer in a new dress and with a certain air of sprightly juvenility about it. The News and Observer, as such, is not an old paper, beginning with the Raleigh News about twenty years ago. As times and fates go, that is quite an old age for newspapers in North Carolina. And so brother Asheville News and Observer, and the hoary signs of age to gather upon its venerable face, until like an unkempt and unshaven man, it appeared older than it was. But those were only externals, as we now learn; the spirit and vigor was there all the while, undimmed and unweakened. A new dress makes all the difference; the masquerade of old clothes is thrown away, and the News and Observer is shown into the field as gay and fresh and youthful as if its new suit were its habitual costume. Long may it wear it and drink always from the fountain of youth.

Delmar Guancio, a Spaniard, who is now visiting the principal cities in this country, does not speak a word of English. He expresses his wants by pictures. If he wants a pitcher of water he shows the picture of a pitcher to the bell boy. If he desires to attend the theatre he shows a picture of a stage with a sign to take him to the best show in town.

GOSSIP OF THE DAY.

"Yes," mused an Asheville druggist yesterday, "we as a class are an abused set of mortals. It is haste from morning until night. When a person wants anything in the drug line, they want it quick and of course we are kept on a jump to wait on them. Let a man come in here for a prescription for some trifling complaint and you would imagine it was a case of life or death with him. If it takes some little time he frets and fumes and not unfrequently indulges in a picturesque flow of profanity. No matter what he wants, we can never get it soon enough. This is the average man. There are some of course who wait patiently and do not expect everything to be done in a minute. But there is no average woman. They are all alike, and they fly in and out of a drug store as if it were something to be shunned. It is a positive fact that a woman who will spend two hours in a dry goods store just 'shopping' can not spend two minutes in waiting for a prescription, or even to pick out a face powder.

Adropos of the recent visit to Asheville of Robert Garrett, the ex-president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, and of his refusal to be interviewed it might be said that he comes as honestly by his hatred for the press as perhaps any man on earth. When his unfortunate malady first attacked him, it was of course universally regretted and columns were filled with stories of his insanity. But not content with this, some enterprising scavenger, who goes by the name of reporter, secreted himself near where he was confined and furnished his paper with detailed accounts of the nature of his hallucinations. It is doubtful if a more contemptible act was ever committed by a reporter. When Mr. Garrett partially recovered and learned of the occurrence he set his foot against newspaper men, and it is almost certain that he will never again be interviewed knowingly.

Droll Bob Burdett has written a great many humorous articles, but the latest from his pen is certainly a gem. In his imitable style he tells of a Westerner who, after years of study and application, had acquired the language of the "Hub" until he was quite as proficient as a native. One night the building in which this wise man and rooms caught fire. The flames crept on; they seized upon him, absorbed in study. But the clothing had not been more than half burned off his back before he realized what was going on. Rushing out into the street he lifted up his voice and gave the terrible alarm that thrills the stoutest hearts: Conflagration! Conflagration! Hasten either with the mechanical apparatus designed for the suppression of combustion.

The fabulous wealth of the Astor family did not buy contentment. There was a skeleton in their closet. Two hours after John Jacob Astor breathed his last, Mrs. William Astor sailed for Europe. She lived less than a block away, but for some time the families have not been on friendly terms, and she was not informed of his death. Wealth does not buy happiness, but yet even with this demonstration there will be many who would be willing to take their chances.

The Salisbury Watchman says that the authorities of the town light the street lamps by Blum's almanac rather than as the necessities of the case suggest. It might also be gently hinted that some Asheville authorities are troubled with the same complaint, and that it would be a good idea to light the tower lamps when the moon fails to carry out her part of the program.

PERSONALS.

The estate of the late Robert Browning is valued at about $85,000.

Senator Quay is having good luck in Florida as a fisherman, but he still suffers from insomnia.

It is said that the marriage of another daughter of the Prince of Wales has been arranged, and that it will be publicly announced in April.

The oldest cashier in point of service in New York is Alexander Gilbert of the Fulton Bank. He was made cashier of that institution in 1863, when he was 24 years of age.

The little son of the late Duke of Aosta by his niece-wife, Princess Letitia, has received from King Humbert the title of Count di Salerni. This was done at the suggestion of the premier, Signor Crispi, who is an old Garibaldian.

Mr. Alex. S. Murray, director of the British Museum, London, is expected to visit New York in May on the invitation of the trustees of the Museum of Art. He is to deliver three lectures on Greek sculpture.

Sir Francis Knollys, private secretary to the Prince of Wales, writes a denial of the report that the Prince and Princess of Wales were going to Canada to spend the summer on account of ill health. He declares they were never better in their lives.

Ralph Disraeli, a brother of Lord Beaconsfield, has retired, at the age of 80, after fifty years of public service, from the office of deputy clerk of the parliament, to which he was appointed by Lord Beaconsfield.

Prince Albert, of Monaco, is said to intend to devote the $150,000 a year that he gets from the gamblers to the completion of the cathedral and other public improvements. He is very wealthy himself and has an enormously rich wife.

Great preparations are being made for a reunion of ex-rebel officers at Atlanta, Ga., on April 20 next. The three surviving generals of the rebel army—Johnson, Beauregard and Smith—are to be invited, with six lieutenant generals, about thirty major generals and one hundred or so brigadier generals.

The fire bug who has been making things so hot for the residents of Rocky Mount has taken a vacation. A guard is still kept for the rascal.

The New Bern and Wilson baseball teams played a good game at New Bern. At the end of nine innings the score stood 5 to 4 in favor of the visitors.

The fire bug who has been making things so hot for the residents of Rocky Mount has taken a vacation. A guard is still kept for the rascal.

The Goldsboro Lumber company is the name of a new corporation in Goldsboro. It has a capital of $100,000, and a Northern firm owns one-fourth of the stock.

A nine months old colored infant at Raleigh died from a dose of laudanum administered by mistake. The druggist innocently substituted the drug for an order for paregoric.

Two small boys found a pair of mounds used in making bogus silver dollars at Raleigh. It is thought that they belonged to a negro who was arrested last summer for shoving the queer.

Luckey & Co., who have been doing a general merchandise business in Montgomery county, have assigned. Their liabilities will amount to $3,000. The assets are unknown.

James Davis will swing at Petersburg on March 28 for the murder of a man named Horton. The tribunal before which he was found guilty has refused to appeal to the supreme court.

The sheriff from whom Lige Moore escaped at Greensboro has been indicted by the Guilford county grand jury, and his bond is fixed at $1,000. Moore was subsequently captured and hanged.

Vance county has spooks at present. At a point in the public road near North Cove an underground roaring can be heard, and the people put so much faith in its being the work of ghosts that they will not pass the place after nightfall.

The Boston Herald has the following: "A North Carolina man has got the name of sixty-nine of his relatives on his petition for a postoffice, and has presented it to the President. He evidently understands Harrison's weakness."

The Danbury Reporter and Post tells a story of a dentist who fitted a false tooth into a man's mouth and found it shorter than the others. To even up matters he fitted the other two down so that they would mate with his botched job.

At Rockingham, in Richmond county, a crowd of regulators visited a house of ill fame and severely whipped three of the inmates, Bettie Shepard, Sallie Deaton and Kate Benoit. The best citizens of Rockingham are said to have participated.

The recent sensational dispatch from Egypt stating that forty men had been imprisoned all night by the caving in of a mine has upon investigation proved to be without truth. The occurrence existed only in the brain of a Charlotte newspaper man who does correspondence for half a cent a word, and who is making it pay.

Bryant and Albert Phillips and George Burroughs, of Harper's Cross Roads, near Petersburg, have been arrested for counterfeiting. A government detective has been working on the case for some time, and finally got on the inside of the workings of the crowd. He suddenly disappeared, returned with several officers and the arrests followed.

Miss Alice Kennedy, of Sampson county, is a brave woman. While sleeping at the side of her mother a few nights ago she heard a burglar attempting to force an entrance. She drew a pistol from beneath her pillow and quietly awaited developments. When the fellow had gotten into the room, she coolly aimed at his head and fired. The ball went straight to the mark, and the little woman had killed Sam Kerns, a noted negro desperado of that county.

THE OLD NORTH STATE.

The Reidsville Review is a year old. Rutherford College has 138 students. The Little Lord Fauntleroy craze has struck Wilmington.

Raleigh is eating new Irish potatoes grown in that vicinity.

Six hundred negro voters are represented to have left Wake county.

Fruit around Wilmington is said to have been injured by the late frost.

Captain Calvin Barnes, of Wilson, made $400 from one acre of tobacco.

The Knights of Labor claim a membership of 10,000 in North Carolina.

The Rocky Mount Phalanx has suspended. It will appear again next fall.

Anderson's bridge, which spanned Tar river, was destroyed some few days ago.

There are 128 saw and planing mills along the line of the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley road.

A negro named Harris was drowned in the Yadkin river in Yadkin county by the giving away of a dam.

A country man at Wilmington was arrested and fined $5 for throwing oranges peeling on the sidewalk.

The institution for the deaf, dumb and blind is becoming so crowded that another wing will have to be added.

A special train running between New Bern and Goldsboro ran over and killed a drunken negro near Tuscarora.

A hog bitten by a mad dog at Petersburg died of hydrophobia last Sunday—just twenty-seven days after being bitten.

In the near future Hendersonville will pump its water through a hydrant. A contract for a complete water system has just been let.

The Banner hotel property in Asheville has been bought by the Farmers' Alliance and will be used as a warehouse and exchange store.

The masons are represented in North Carolina by fifty-one lodges composed of tired of colored men. The membership is nearly 1,200.

William Ray, a colored boy of Rutherford, "didn't know it was loaded," but as he only killed himself, nobody else has a right to complain.

Noah Brown was charged with stealing a horse before the Yadkin court, but proved that he won the equine at a game of cards and was acquitted.

Captain Wendell Hart, formerly conductor on the Atlantic Coast Line, and well known throughout the State, died Wednesday at Rocky Mount.
